

Ethics & malpractice statement

The Journal of Mechanism and Institution Design (JMID) take the topics of ethics & malpractice very seriously. Acceptance of this statement is a precondition for publication in JMID. A concise guide on the general position JMID supports can be found on the COPE website (<http://goo.gl/aWy7WX>). All main stipulations from this guide are adopted for the JMID ethics and malpractice position. In particular, the following guidelines apply:

1) Scope of responsibilities and rights of editors, reviewers and authors. The chief editor is ethically responsible for ensuring that material to be published is accurate, complete, and valid. The editors serve the author(s) by selecting unbiased reviewers and by providing the assurance that material will be selected for publication based solely on the scientific quality of the reviewed material. Peer reviewers confidentiality is ensured throughout the review process. Authors are responsible citing references completely, ensuring accuracy, and completeness. Any competing interests must be disclosed by all participating individuals. Potential ethical issues arising from the work must be disclosed.

2) If misconduct is detected in the sense of the COPE stipulations or the JMID guidelines, we will formally investigate the articles(s) and person(s) involved. In case of a confirmed misconduct, this will lead to the retraction of work under investigation.
